

Hey y'all, how's it hoppin'? It's Cody-G here, and today imma going to talk about how I got into my dream college, Hahvahd Yahd. I went through a reeeaaaaalllly bad time in high school in order to get to where I am today. It is worth my guys, it is worth. BUT it's really important to work hard! Don't forget that just studying doesn't help you much. You need to follow up every study session with a trip to Switzerland for a quick study break. Of course, this would cost a lot of money if you studied every day, so remember to minimize studying at much as possible. It works my dudes! I got a 1600 on the SAT, so I KNOW. I GOTChUS. Just do what I did, and it will work like a clock. Here are ten of my best tips. Just for all 30,000 of you. (sorry I did not blog about my new car)

Tip no 1. Keep up with your schoolwork. It's very important. Look with the kid with the plaid and the glasses, they will be your new best friend. Just slip them some bills if you need help. Also, always sit next to them (at the very least, during tests).

Tip no 2. Coffee. Never forget lots of Starbucks (get many flavors and types depending on your mood), my favorite is the pumpkin spice latte, it smells so good, sometimes I don't even need to drink it. There's nothing like paying $8.95 for an 8mL drink to get you going in the morning. It works. I know it does. I am living proof. This will get you through all the tough stuff you need to do. I remember one time when I had to do long division. It was soooo traumatic. I will never forget. I still have scars on my hand from writing so much. #nevahforget

Tip no 3. Use all the resources you have for preparing for the SATs. They are the primary source of stress for everyone. But also, the one thing that will get you into a good school. I used my parent's resources, for instance. It was very useful to have a parents, because I hired the three best tutors in the world. I learned so much from them, like how to factor a polynomial and which country Africa is in. Don't be one of those idiots who use Khan Academy. If it's free, it isn't worth it my dudes.

Tip no 4. Don't fall into the extracurricular trap. You're better off studying and going to Switze to relax than going to some random food pantry to feed some dirty people who probably suck anyways and never worked a day in their lives.

Tip no 5. Remember to sleep. I say, I slept a solid 12 hrs every night! I don't get all these randos being like "I only get 6 hours of sleep I got so much work blah blah blah". Honestly my dudes, its so EASY! Just forget about everything else, put on some of that sleeping brain wave tunes, and have at it my guys. It's the best → https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5H\_kiCyo0Bs #NONSPON. It's the best. I remember EVERYTHING that I need to know. That's why I get so much good grades. I mean seriously. I study for a solid 13 minutes each night, and I still manage to get As in all of my AP classes. And I'm taking all five APs. Don't worry about those individual assignments like papers or tests, it's fine my dudes, it's all good. Even if you fail every assignment, you'll still get an A in the class if you follow these ten tips.

Tip no 6. To all the nay-sayers out there, Imma going to put it up for the record that you don't need to stress out about your future. I've heard so many blog posts and guidance counselors out there talking about how you "need to have a plan blah blah blah". How you need to know your major and all. How you need to go to a bunch of career fairs in order to get connections in order to get work. Honestly, my guys, just use the resources you have. Just ask your parents to get you a job, and they will. Don't stress out about it. All good things come to whoever waits. Also, I've heard of people deciding what they want to major in high school, when they apply to college. Honestly. Just get into Harvard, MIT, or UChicago. No matter what, don't go to Yale. After that, you're set. Find your passion. You don't need to know what you want until the second semester of senior year.

Tip no 7. Always be courteous. Both to me and others. Don't belittle my struggles. I've heard of people complaining that they work so hard to get into college and that I shouldn't get a spot in the university. That's simply not true. I've worked just as hard, if not harder, than most of my peers to get into the college I deserve. Honestly, those people who say that they've cured cancer and helped out the elderly and have had to go through tons of struggles because their parents didn't work enough? And those people who say that they should take my university spot? They're either lying or stupid. It's hard enough to find people who have worked harder than me, don't bring those types of people into the picture as well.

Tip no 8. Hydrate or diedrate. But only with top-quality Fiji Water.

Tip no 9. Apply to A LOT of colleges (like 50 something). You'll get accepted by some, and then you've got lots of options! OR apply early decision if you really like one, because there's no need to think about financial aid or any of that crap! So why not?

Tip no 10. Relax, have fun, and enjoy the ride! Remember that school is only to gain access to more parties, so don't worry about a thing!

Legend:		Understatement
		Hyperbole
		Colloquialism
		Irony
		Imagery
		Pathos
		Logos
		Reductio ad Absurdum
		Burlesque